

Hotep Calvin,

Thank you for your powerful and enlightening "A Theological Treatise on The Afrikan Origins Of Christianity And Other Western Religions". It could have just as well have been entitled "A Theological Treatise on The Afrikan Origins of ALL Religions". It is a clear, concise and easily followed road map to overstanding the truth as it pertains to the foundation of all religions of world.

I am currently using your treatise as an outreach to those seekers of truth who have never been exposed to this knowledge (what I call "Plateaued Christians"), as well as for those, such as myself, who are involved in deeper overstanding and studies into knowledge of self and our ancestry.

This writing will be an invaluable reference tool for years to come in my work, not only for the well thought out and structured content, but also for the source of references which I am using for further study and teaching. I am strongly encouraging all of the members of the Ka Men's Society, as well as the KRST Unity committee to establish curriculum to make this work a part of their reference material.

Also, I want to thank you specifically for new enlightenment and overstanding on the name "Afrika". I no longer struggle with the previous perception that The Motherland was re-named by Europeans, and how it should be referred to! I can continue to proudly and boldly proclaim that "We are an Afrikan People!!!"

In the tradition of J.A. Rogers, George G. M. James and a plethora of other scholars who have continuously enlightened us on the historical truths of humanities religious origins, Calvin Kennedy's A Theological Treatise on the Afrikan Origins of Christianity and Other Western Religions is illuminating thoughtful and insightful facts. Although his "treatise" is short, it nevertheless cut open a huge portion of the historical falsifications that have so long permeated what we thought we knew about historical origins Christianity.

Kennedy's chapter on Heru and Jesus will be controversial to some and liberating to others. Also, the numerous images that have been selected for this volume speaks to the unprecedented pictorial documents that can be seen if one were to visit the Ancient temples that lie in North Eastern Africa.

This manuscript deals a death blow to the ethnocentric lies that have been used over the years to conceal the greatness of the African people. I highly recommend this book to all who are on the never ending path for truth.
